The National Organization of Black Law Enforcement Executives (NOBLE) Recognizes Midterm Election Winners

[Alexandria, VA] The 2018 Midterm Elections saw an unprecedented number of voters at the polls in what was a contentious election cycle. The National Organization of Black Law Enforcement Executives (NOBLE) would like to congratulate all the winners. NOBLE is committed to working across the aisle to bring about real change in our communities.

"I am thrilled to work with our newest members of Congress to develop fresh and innovative ways to further policies that will create a better working relationship between law enforcement and the communities they serve," said NOBLE National President Vera Bumpers. "A diverse government creates a unique opportunity for us to work together for the betterment of our country."

NOBLE is committed to inspiring all communities by empowering citizens and law enforcement with facts, data, and support resources to help ensure procedural justice. Our organization will continue to defend and support the U.S. Constitution, most importantly the 14th amendment, which provides to all Americans equal protection under the law.

"We believe that it is not only important for people to obey and respect the law, but for the law to also respect the people," said Bumpers. "Through 21st Century Policing Best Practices, we look forward to sharing with Congress ways in which trustworthy motives and transparency on behalf of law enforcement will further develop a more positive relationship between police and the people they have sworn to serve."

Additionally, NOBLE will continue to advocate for Sentencing & Corrections Reform, Adoption of the National Consensus Policy on Use of Force, and the FBI National Use of Force Data Collection.
